ABOUT ANAND- AMRIT 2024

Mindfulness, Spirituality and Sustainable Happiness

In a fast-paced and often chaotic world, individuals seek solace and purpose, leading to a growing interest in practices that promote well-being and fulfillment. Three pillars that have gained prominence in this pursuit are mindfulness, spirituality, and sustainable happiness. Each of these concepts offers a unique perspective and set of tools for individuals to navigate the complexities of modern life and foster a deeper connection with themselves, others, and the world around them.

Mindfulness, rooted in ancient contemplative traditions, empowers individuals to navigate stress, anxiety, and the demands of daily life with greater clarity and resilience. It encourages individuals to engage fully with their experiences, thoughts, and emotions without judgment. Spirituality, on the other hand, transcends the boundaries of organized religions and encompasses a broader exploration of the human experience. It encourages individuals to delve into questions of identity, morality, and the nature of existence, providing a framework for personal growth and a deeper understanding of one's place in the Universe. Sustainable happiness, a relatively recent concept, goes beyond fleeting moments of joy and pleasure. It involves the cultivation of long-lasting well-being that is rooted in positive emotions, a sense of purpose, and meaningful connections with others.

This one-day virtual conference has been planned to deliberate, share the research work, and exchange practices that have been found effective at workplaces. The conference is open to academicians, researchers, doctoral students, research associates and other members of the student community, as well as industry delegates.
